

Enterocutaneous fistula due to a strangulated Richter's femoral hernia: a case report

Emmanuel Murwanashyaka¹, Robinson Ssebuufu², and Patrick Kyamanywa²

¹University of Rwanda College of Medicine and Health Sciences

²Kampala International University - Western Campus

April 12, 2021

Abstract

Richter's hernia has a misleading presentation with absence of typical intestinal obstructive symptoms leading to delay in making a diagnosis, tendency to strangulation and eventual spontaneous fistula formation. This article explores a case of enterocutaneous fistula that was managed non-operatively until spontaneous closure.

Hosted file

ENTEROCUTANEOUS FISTULA DUE TO A STRANGULATED RITCHER HERNIA 26 March 2021.pdf available at <https://authorea.com/users/407350/articles/517658-enterocutaneous-fistula-due-to-a-strangulated-ritcher-s-femoral-hernia-a-case-report>

